

RUMOR PRESIDENT BENES RESIGNS POST

800 At Town Hall Hear Von Schuschnigg Plead For A Unified Europe

Tracing a marked similarity in the imperialistic methods of Adolf Hitler's German Socialistic state and Stalin's present day Communist Russia, Dr. Kurt Von Schuschnigg, former Austrian chancellor, Monday evening advocated "a form of unification" for western Europe as the only solution to the problems of Central Europe and the war threat to the world.

Speaking at the concluding Town Hall meeting, Dr. Von Schuschnigg said the federation of western Europe "should include eastern Europe, too," but indicated that is highly improbable in view of Russia's continued step by step expansion of control.

More than 800 people, the largest Town Hall audience this season, heard the retired Austrian politician, who was held seven years in a Nazi concentration camp, outline in a factual way the expansion of Russia's sphere of influence and compare it with Hitler's methods.

He pointed out that both systems take over control of neighboring countries by creating an illusion of revolution and threatening disorder and then demand the powers of the subjected country to install a government similar to the totalitarian one in Russia and formerly in Germany.

Recalls Own Experiences

He cited his own personal experiences with Hitler, when he was forced to turn the government of Austria over to the Nazis prior to World War II. He later was imprisoned after the Nazis came to power.

He drew a parallel between Hitler's gains and Russia's current maneuvering and emphasized the importance of stopping the Russians before another war is inevitable. The economic and military union of western Europe is the answer to the problem, he declared.

He said "Call the federation the United States of Europe, Pan Europe or whatever you want—it must be achieved or the troubles are to be settled peacefully." He added that it might take 20 years to accomplish.

U. S. Aid Needed

Without directly mentioning the Marshall plan, Dr. Von Schuschnigg gave the audience great hope for its effectiveness when he pointed out that the small countries of Europe "must lean either to the west or the east."

He said all the countries would prefer to remain independent, but inasmuch as they couldn't, most of the people would prefer to lean on the United States.

It is on that fact, he underlined, that his sincere belief in the thought, that the hope of the world peace now lies.

Analyzing the countries in the Central European sphere—which he defined as Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia and Hungary as geographically under that title and economically broadened to include Italy—he brought out the following points:

CZECHOSLOVAKIA — He said the recent seizure of that country by Russia was in direct line with the Hitler policy of expansion. He described the Czechs as the "soundest, most basically democratic country in Europe" and praised President Eduard Benes as "the man with the best intentions of forming a living compromise prior to the war to avoid the war." He said the Czechs and Austrians could not achieve harmony between themselves because the two countries had been involved in so many land and province "grabs" against each other.

Election In Argentina

Argentina will have a chance Sunday to express its opinion on the Peron regime when 83 posts are filled in the national chamber of deputies. Unless there is an undercurrent of violent resentment not readily apparent, Peron is likely to find himself as strong as ever because, as in 1946, luck is with him.

Peron's opposition is unorganized, the four principal minority parties being unable to form a coalition. A similar circumstance enabled De Valera to maintain power for 16 years in Eire. As in 1946, an external situation has solidified Peron's support. Two years ago Argentina was resentful of the United States blue book purporting to show a link between Peron and the Nazis. This year Peron's popularity is rising again because the Falklands issue has been brought into focus once more.

While Peron's regime is a dictatorship, it is unusual in that it manages to survive with reasonably free elections. Disorganized minorities, plus incendiary "issues" materializing at election time, have made it unnecessary for the man on horseback to get tough.

End Of The Myth

Secretary of Commerce Harriman gets credit for ending the wartime myth of official compatibility between the United States and Russian government "there are aggressive forces in the world coming from the Soviet union which are just as destructive in their effect on the world and our own way of life as Hitler was," he has said in a congressional hearing. He added that they are a greater menace, in his opinion, than Hitler was. That, of course, is debatable.

The fact is that public opinion in the United States never condoned the Russian government, even during the war. It was sympathetic to the Russian people, who fought valiantly to drive out the invading Germans. The fatuous postwar reasoning that the Nazis somehow must have been better than the Communists because the latter now are belligerent is the kind of error that traps people who want to believe everything is a clear choice between right and wrong. Wartime support of Russia was not a choice between right and wrong. It was an expedient policy for defeating the stronger of two powers both of which were unfriendly to the United States before war began. The Russian government, too, was following an expedient policy, insofar as it pretended to be friendly. The myth of friendship has done great mischief; it never was true. Americans did not subscribe to the Communist dictatorship; they subscribed only to the proposition that Hitlerism had to be squelched by helping the Russian people drive out the invading Germans.

Recovery Program Or Lend-Lease?

It would be shortsighted not to see that the European recovery program—the Marshall plan—could be converted into a lend-lease program by a change in European circumstances.

The change is by no means impossible. The stage has been set for the beginning of senate debate on the matter—but not according to the original plan. Senators, and representatives, when their turn comes, are going to feel crowded by the pressure of such unexpected events as Communist seizure of power in Czechoslovakia, Soviet pressure on Finland the prospect that Italy may be marched into the ranks of Russian puppet states.

Senator Vandenberg, leading off the debate, warns his colleagues that time now is just as important as money. He implies that if action is delayed much longer, money may become useless. European aid, he reminds the country, is a plan to stop World War III before it starts. Once it had started, the United States would have lost all power of decision. The billions it may decide to spend for a Marshall plan would be lost in the multi-billions it would have to spend under a plan for General mobilization if Russia succeeds in dominating Europe.

Sen. Taft Gives A Sample

Senator Taft has found the Truman administration's most valuable spot—its phony liberalism.

In his speech to Cuyahoga county Republicans Saturday night, Ohio's favorite son said what has needed saying for a long time—that the Democratic party stands for "complete regimentation of the American people."

Then because the Democratic party has become a political what-is-it that must be defined, he defined it as a "Donkey without a head or a tail" which Harry Truman is trying to ride to victory in the 1948 campaign.

Henry Wallace has run away with the party's left wing, and southern reactionaries are threatening to run away with the other, leaving Mr. Truman with a remnant that has nothing to offer but more and more regimentation of the people. "Every measure advocates in the Democratic program," Senator Taft charged, "is anti-liberal, will decrease the freedom of the people and will increase the arbitrary control of the government. President Truman wants complete power over prices, wages, rationing and allocations."

The inevitable result—and this is the key issue of the 1948 campaign—would be the continued increase of an already crushing tax burden.

Improvement of the citizenry to satisfy the power greed of a government that has stayed too long in office is not liberalism. That had begun to be evident even before the war and is more evident now, when the disintegration of the new deal coalition, then only beginning, is almost complete.

Senator Taft's role in politics is to say what men of less courage don't say and to do what they are afraid to do. That is how he won the confidence of millions of Americans who have learned to think of him as a symbol of political integrity. That is why he is Ohio's favorite son for the Republican presidential nomination.

His speech Saturday night was a sample of the hard-hitting campaign he would wage as his party's banner bearer in the presidential race.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, March 3

BENIGN auguries are for a day of thrilling adventure, tension, excitement, in which the mentality, emotions, feelings and aspirations are keyed to the Nth degree of desire and expectancy.

And although the activities, inclinations and forces may be pitched to the romantic idealistic or unrealistic, yet is found a deep, profound and dependable undercurrent for the sound, practical, worthy and enduring, for the laying of firm foundations even in the midst of fantastic and chimerical vision and goals. With diligence, reflection and calmness, great dreams could come true.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of dramatic, exciting, adventurous and bewildering events or experiences, in which the feelings, emotions, energies and impulses seem to run riot to a bewildering and bemused culmination.

With sudden unroiling, radical change, revamped plans and objectives, it might seem a ruinous and disruptive program. Yet at base there is a structure of solidarity, wisdom, good sense and conservation to warrant the prospect of sensational moves with erratic and irregular performance or seeming defeat, turning into secure, enduring and far-reaching crises and gratifications.

A child born on this day may have exceptional ingenuity, talents and versatility; while romantic and impulsive, yet has a sterling and dependable character at its core.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Congress has ended its inquiry into why the commodity markets went up and is now ready to investigate why the commodity markets went down.

And if the market drops in the middle and doesn't move in either direction, there will be an inquiry into that too.

This should not be considered unusual . . . in fact there were experts still working on the causes of the depression when they were yanked off the job to work on the causes of inflation.

We can take our eyes off the quotations just long enough to watch Connecticut's experiment with perfumed snow to make winter more pleasant.

The idea is to see clouds with perfumed ice crystals in the future it will be safe for a man to come home smelling of perfume provided it is snowing.

But he had better not try to blame the eye shadow on his lips on a blizzard.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Symptoms of Sleeping Sickness

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FROM time to time, public imagination is caught and held by newspaper stories of children or adults who "sleep" for months or even years, like the princess, however, there is for many such people no joyful awakening, for they are victims of encephalitis or inflammation of the brain, a malady against which medical science has as yet no magic.

There are many forms of this disease, which is now known to be caused by several different viruses. It may also develop following other more common infections, such as measles or mumps.

Sleeping Sickness

The most important and best-known type of encephalitis is the one described by Dr. von Economo in 1916. It is known as lethargic encephalitis or sleeping sickness. At the present time, it seems to occur rarely, but widespread epidemics of it have broken out not only in the United States but elsewhere. This malady usually occurs during the winter season, and it is thought that it develops about ten days after the person has been exposed to it. It may attack persons of any age, but is most common between the ages of ten and thirty years. Unfortunately, the exact manner in which this sickness is spread has not been determined, but it does not seem to spread directly from one person to another.

Three Stages

There are three stages of the disease; An acute period which lasts from a few days to several months; then a period during which there are few, if any, symptoms this period lasting for several years; then there follows a chronic stage, which may last for the rest of the patient's life.

During the first stages of the disease, there may be sleepiness with little fever. On the other hand, in some cases, the patient is excited and overactive, with high fever. Sometimes the disease runs a very rapid course, with extremely high fever, convulsions, and similar symptoms. In some instances there are mild pains, double vision, headache, and sleeplessness.

Chronic Stage

In the chronic stage, there are twitches and trembling. There may be some paralysis, convulsions, and changes in the personality, together with disturbances of sleep. Sleeplessness is simply just one symptom—not the most common. It may start at the beginning of the illness and last for the rest of the patient's life. Usually it lasts for a few days, occasionally a few months, and then recovery follows. The thing to remember, however, is that sleeplessness is a very rare symptom and, while dramatic and even accepted as an aid in naming the illness, it is still not too important.

Pressure Applied For Adoption of Morgenthau Plan

The Memoirs Of Cordell Hull

BY CORDELL HULL
Copyright, 1948, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.
INSTALLMENT 32

WHEN THE PRESIDENT decided to meet with Prime Minister Churchill for the second Quebec conference, in September, 1944, he asked me whether I wished to accompany him. The conference, however, was intended to be largely military. I was not well, the Dumbarton Oaks conference was in progress, and I told him I preferred to remain in Washington but would be available if he needed me. Shortly before the conference was due to assemble, the President was due to permit Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to attend the meeting. Morgenthau and his friends had been working for some time on a drastic plan for the postwar treatment of Germany, and the leaders of groups who had been justly wrought up by German outrages requested the President to invite Morgenthau to go to Quebec primarily to present his plan for Germany.

The President himself leaned to the idea that the German people as a whole should be given a lesson they would remember. On Aug. 26, 1944, he had sent a long memorandum to Secretary of War Stimson, a copy of which was sent to me, protesting against the handbills drawn up for the guidance of military government officials in Germany.

"It gives the impression," he said, "that Germany is to be restored just as much as the Netherlands or Belgium, and the people of Germany brought back as quickly as possible to their prewar estate."

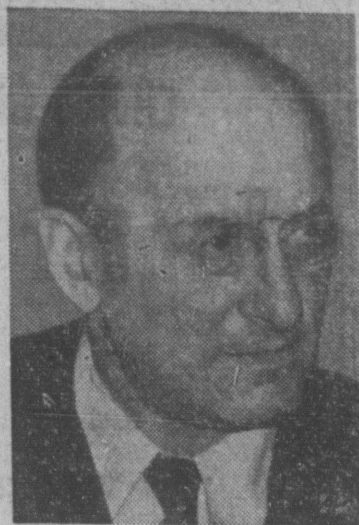

"It is of the utmost importance that every person in Germany should realize that this time Germany is a defeated nation. I do not want them to starve to death, but, as an example, if they need food to keep body and soul together beyond what they have, they should be fed three times a day with soup from Army soup kitchens. That will keep them perfectly healthy, and they will remember that experience all their lives. The fact that they are a defeated nation, collectively and individually, must be so impressed upon them that they will hesitate to start any new war."

Disposal of Nazi Navy
WITH REGARD to the disposition of the German navy, the President advanced a new idea. He wrote me a memorandum on Oct. 13 in which he said he agreed with the views of the Joint Chiefs of Staff with regard to the complete destruction of the German fleet, but he had one amendment to make.

"Destruction in the past," he said, "has meant taking the ships to sea and sinking them. I think that in some cases surrendered ships have been destroyed by converting them into scrap metal. It is not like the idea of complete destruction by the sinking of thousands of tons of steel."

"Recently a new use for such ships has been discovered. We have used sunken ships as breakwaters for the formation of new harbors. This has been done in Italy and it has been done on the coast of Normandy. It is a relatively cheap way to build a breakwater. I think that the United Nations should be in position to pass on applications by Allied nations for these ships for the definite and specific purpose of sinking them as breakwaters to improve or create safe anchorages. It is rather a nice thought to use them for such peaceful purposes."

"In any such cases, the ships should be sunk at a designated place as quickly as possible and under the eyes of a United Nations committee. Once sunk it would be practically impossible to raise them and restore them to war purposes."

Harry Hopkins came to me on Sept. 1, 1944, and informed me of the President's desire to establish a "Cabinet Committee on Germany."

I held the first meeting of the "Cabinet Committee" in my office on Sept. 5, with Hopkins, Morgenthau, and Stimson attending. I laid before them a memorandum my associates and I had prepared, dated Sept. 4, containing suggested recommendations the Cabinet Committee might present to the President. Secretary Stimson agreed with virtually all this memorandum, but he would not commit himself to it. Harry Hopkins sent me a note on Sept. 5 in which he said that, with minor reservations about language which did not affect the content of the document, he approved it.

Morgenthau Unchanged
ON THE FOLLOWING day our little group met with the President at the White House. I presented to the President our memorandum of Sept. 4, with the statement that it had not been agreed to by the other members of the committee, but might serve as a basis for discussion. Stimson presented a War department memorandum that was very largely in line with our memorandum. Morgenthau, however, presented the original drastic Treasury memorandum.

The discussion that followed was inconclusive. The distance between the views of the State and War departments on the one hand and of the Treasury on the other was so great that no meeting of minds ensued.

Thus the matter stood when the Quebec conference met on Sept. 11. We had been able to achieve no further reconciliation of views. I have already stated, the President was induced to permit Morgenthau to attend the conference, at which the latter intended to advocate his extreme plan before the President and the Prime Minister. I requested Ray Atherton, our ambassador to Canada, to represent us at the meetings.

Four days after the conference began, I was astonished to receive from the President a memorandum addressed to me, dated Sept. 15, which indicated that he and Churchill had largely embraced Morgenthau's ideas.

The memorandum set forth that the President and the Prime Minister felt that an essential feature of the best measures to prevent renewed rearmament by Germany was the future disposition of the Ruhr and the Saar. The ease with which the metallurgical, chemical and electric industries in Germany could be converted from peace to war had already been impressed upon us by bitter experience. It had also to be remembered that the Germans had devastated a large portion of the industries of Russia and of other neighboring Allies, and it was only just that these injured countries should be entitled to remove the machinery they required in order to repair the losses they had suffered.

The memorandum then stated: "The industries referred to in the Ruhr and in the Saar would therefore be necessarily put out of action and closed down. It was felt that the two districts should be put under somebody under the World Organization which would supervise the dismantling of these industries and make sure that they were not started up again by some subterfuge."

"This program for eliminating the war-making industries in the Ruhr and in the Saar is looking forward to converting Germany into a country primarily agricultural and pastoral in its character."

"The Prime Minister and the President were in agreement upon this program."

In his note to me introducing this memorandum, the President said this seemed eminently satisfactory to him and he thought I would approve the general idea of not rehabilitating the Ruhr, Saar, etc.

I COULD NOT, however, approve any program "looking forward to converting Germany into a country primarily agricultural and pastoral in its character." Seventy million Germans could not live on the land within Germany. They would either starve or become a charge upon other nations. This was a scheme that would arouse the eternal resentment of the Germans. It would punish all of them and future generations too for the crimes of a portion of them. It would punish not only Germany but also most of Europe.

The President also said in his note to me that he thought he had worked out the locations of the occupying forces in Germany. He had been hoping to get the northwestern portion of Germany as the American zone of occupation, but finally agreed with Churchill that Britain should have it, while the United States would have most of Southern Germany, including Bavaria.

On the same day, Sept. 15, that the President sent me the memorandum embracing the Morgenthau plan and the decision on the zones of occupation, he sent me another memorandum which informed me that Morgenthau had presented at Quebec, in conjunction with his plan for Germany, a proposal of credits to Britain totalling six and a half billion dollars. This might suggest to some the nature of a quid pro quo with which the secretary of the treasury was able to get Mr. Churchill's adherence to his cataclysmic plan for Germany.

The President said in his memorandum that he had agreed that, after the defeat of Germany and while the war against Japan went on, Britain should continue to receive munitions assistance from us to the extent of $3,500,000,000 and non-munitions assistance of $3,000,000,000. He concurred in Churchill's statement that if the United Kingdom was once more to pay her way it was essential that her export trade, which had shrunk to a very small fraction, should be re-established.

Naturally no articles obtained on Lend-Lease or identical thereto would be exported or sold attach any conditions to supplies delivered to Britain on Lend-Lease which would jeopardize the recovery of her export trade.

This struck me amidschips. It tended to shatter negotiations we had been conducting with the British for three years. It derogated from Article VII of our basic Lend-Lease agreement with Britain, signed in 1942, which provided that Britain would adopt a non-discriminatory commercial policy after the war, meaning that she would give up imperial tariff preferences.

This whole development at Quebec, I believe, angered me as much as anything that had happened during my career as Secretary of State. If the Morgenthau plan leaked out, as it inevitably would—and shortly did—it might well mean a bitter-end German resistance that could cause the loss of thousands of American lives.

"She met him in Cleveland," Ann said, her face troubled. "At a cocktail party. She didn't talk about anything else for days. They had lunch several days later and she came home floating on the clouds. So Rush and I wanted to meet him. Naturally, we wanted to know his family, where he went to school, what he did."

"And...?"
Ann shook her head.
"Nothing."
"Nothing? But surely—"
Ann shrugged helplessly.

"He says he finished high school before he went into the Army. He's from a small town in Indiana. He has no relatives. Or so he says. If he has any plans for the future I don't know what they are. He's pleasant, he's charming, he's fun. She spread her hands in a futile gesture.

"Doesn't he want to go to college?"
"He doesn't seem to have any desire to anything. Rinda, I like him a lot—you can't help liking him—but he doesn't seem to have a scrap of ambition."

"Well, how does he happen to be here? At Tophill?"

"That's a story of its own. He had a small apartment somewhere downtown but the landlord wanted it. I guess that's the only way people can be evicted these days. Tommy couldn't find a place to live. So you know Laurie, she just said, as casually as you'd offer someone a cigarette, why not come out to Tophill until you find something. It's a big house. Can't you hear her?" Ann smiled faintly. "So he came. Last January."

"January? Why—and do you mean he's not looked for anything since then? Never suggested leaving?"
"Well, of course Laurie and he keep busy. I don't think they've looked at all lately. Of course, it's Laurie's house, too, and it's big enough. That part doesn't matter. It's his—her house."

"Has it become an actual issue? Is Laurie trying to force your hand?"

"We haven't come to blows yet. Rush has talked to her and he has some influence, she listens to him. Of course, you see, she has a point; the will is unfair. It enrages her, naturally."

"It may work out," Rinda said. "Tommy may wake up some morning eaten up with ambition. They could be married and go to school—it's being done everywhere, you know."

"But if he isn't willing to show any inclination before he gets his hands on several hundred thousand dollars how d'you think he'll act when he does? I've never noticed that suddenly getting a lot of money was any inducement to work."

"There aren't any strings at all? I mean, you just give them your blessing and it's all theirs? There isn't any middle course?"

"Not if they get married. If I don't approve I have to go on record and then she gets an allowance until she's thirty."

"It seems to me a will like that could be broken."

"That's what we thought. We'd have been glad if it could have been. I hate it."

"Well, then—"
"But I know what Dad had in mind. If I said yes, go ahead, now, I'd feel as though I were letting him down."

Rinda opened her mouth and then closed it again. She drew her gloves on slowly, tugging each finger into proper position. And then she said, "There's another angle, Ann. Suppose I hadn't found you last night? What would have happened to the money?"

"The porch floor tipped gently under Ann's chair. She held onto the arms of the chair to steady herself.

"I—t... She swallowed hard and cleared her throat.

Rinda said slowly: "Then it does make a difference?"

"Difference? What a difference! My death changes everything. My father had a mind of his own and he had no intention of letting the Forrester money get out of the family. If I should die—" her voice was husky—"when I die everything goes to Laurie. Outright. My share too."

"Good Lord! But why—" "I have no children," Ann's voice was thin. "If I had children, they would inherit from me. But it doesn't stretch to husbands."

"You mean Rush would be—Oh, no, I didn't mean to say that. Ann. It's just that it seems so—so unfair!"

"It is." She forced herself to smile at Rinda. She was shaking. "Don't let it upset you. We're all used to it. It's a family joke. Laurie and I each have plenty and if she insists upon marrying Tommy we'll give in gracefully. I truly wouldn't mind, Rinda, if they weren't so young and if it weren't for the drinking. She kept on talking, mouthing words.

She didn't dare let Rinda see how the terror had taken full possession of her. Dear God! How could she have been so blind? (To Be Continued)

Tournaments Open In Five Other Class A Ohio Districts

Niles, Canton McKinley Win A Openers At South

By JAMES DAILEY
United Press Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, March 2—Tournament fever gripped the state today, as Class A basketball team in five districts pined those of a sixth in that long, long trail to the state championships finals at Columbus April 3.

The Northeastern district tournament got a head start on the other five a week ago at Youngstown. Winners in the six district tournaments will play to the regionals held the weekend of March 18 at Mucklingham college, Toledo university, Xavier university, and Youngstown South fieldhouse.

Last night at Youngstown, Canton McKinley defeated Canton Lehman 38-30 to stay in the thick of things in the Northeastern district. In the only other game, Niles ran wild to hand Warren a 47-25 drubbing.

Stevenson paced the Bulldog scoring and Schaff took the honors for Lehman. In the Niles-Warren fray Manella was high point man for Niles and Manyak starred for the losers.

Tonight's pairings will see Canton Central Catholic tangle with East Palestine, Boardman meets Campbell Memorial, and Youngstown North takes on Austintown Fitch.

Tonight will also see the Northeastern sectional Class A tournament play get underway at Euclid Shore. In the three opening games, Fairview (11-5), holder of fourth place in Southwestern conference competition will meet Parma (6-7) in the opening round.

Bedford, (2-13) will be pretty evenly matched when it engages Maple Heights (2-9), although Bedford turned the trick twice in two season meetings. In the last game, Berea, (13-4), runner-up in the Southwestern loop, will clash with Mentor (8-6).

In Wednesday night's card, Cleveland Heights' Lake Erie leaves rulers are pitted against Garfield Heights, and Ash-tula, runner up in the state finals last year, will meet the winner of the Berea-Mentor game. In the finale, Painesville plays Brush.

Only three undefeated teams—Middletown, Findlay, and Akron Garfield—were entered in the state wide melee, but each district had its own favorites for the coveted crown.

Middletown, the current state champion and winner of the title in three of the last four years, completed its regular schedule Saturday by registering number 18 against Hamilton, 50-39. The Middles will play in the southwestern tournament held at Dayton's Coliseum tonight. Their main competition is expected to come from Hamilton Catholic. With an 18-1 record, and Hamilton Public, 12-4.

Findlay, rated next to Middletown in the long chase and a finalist last year, whipped Toledo Libbey, 57-30, for victory 19, and Akron Garfield made it 15 in a row over Akron West, 59-44.

Findlay was expected to have a fairly easy time of it in its tourney at Findlay but Akron Garfield had Akron South, West, and Massillon, all top teams, in its path at Akron Goodyear.

In the central district opening at Columbus' state fairgrounds coliseum tonight, Newark, beaten by only two points at the hands of Middletown this season, was a heavy favorite. The Wildcats, however, were confronted by Columbus Central, a one-time loser in regular season play.

Lancaster, possessor of a 16-3 record and runnerup to Newark in the Central Ohio league, had a good chance in the Southeastern district. Other teams with fine records in this tourney included: Marietta, 14-5; Hillsboro, 15-4; Athens, 9-5; Portsmouth, 12-5; and Wellston, 13-5.

Toronto, 16-3; Mingo, 14-4; and Coshocton, 13-5, looked like the class of the eastern district. The Wellsville division of the tournament was set to get under way tonight with Toronto meeting the local team—Wellsville high.

TUCSON, Ariz., March 2—The biggest baseball brain trust in the Cleveland Indians' history is on hand here to impart their knowhow to the 37 players on the club roster.

When the Tribe set a precedent yesterday by jumping right into batting practice on the first day of spring training, there were five brain-trusters in addition to the two full-time coaches, Bill McKechnie and Herold (Muddy) Ruel.

And later Hollis Thurston, former Chicago White Sox and Washington hurler, will arrive from a scouting trip on the west coast.

Harder, Tris Speaker and Hank Greenberg are already helping Manager Lou Boudreau who at 30 is seven years younger than the youngest on the staff.

McKechnie, Ruel and Thurston will work with pitchers. Susce is the physical conditioning expert, and Melillo will tutor the infielders. Speaker will instruct the hitters and outfielders, and Greenberg has Pat Seery as a private pupil in the art of slapping homers. Harder will handle the young pitching talent before starting a tour of Tribal farms to develop future Indians hurlers.

Cleveland is now one point—a half game—ahead of the Hornet. A victory tonight while the Hornets are idle would put the Barons three points ahead of the Pittsburghers.

The Clevelanders have 10 more games to play in their regular schedule—six at home and four abroad.

Individual scoring records released today showed that Ab Demarco, Barons center, is tied for fifth place among the league leaders. He has tallied 74 points.

Two other contests are scheduled tonight in the Junior loop. Springfield travels to Hershey, and Providence goes to St. Louis.

Barons Pace Loop; Seeking New Record

(By International News Service)
The Cleveland Barons set their sights on establishing a new American Hockey league record as they staked themselves for a contest with the Philadelphia Rockets tonight in the sixth City arena.

The Barons need only a victory or a tie tonight and tomorrow at Pittsburgh to tie the league record of being undefeated in 19 contests. It was set last season by the Smoky City Iceers.

Cleveland is now one point—a half game—ahead of the Hornet. A victory tonight while the Hornets are idle would put the Barons three points ahead of the Pittsburghers.

High scoring record of 358 points during the season. Pager pumped in 136 field goals in 339 tries. His foul shooting also paced the team, which was very poor.

The big center converted 86 of 156 free throw attempts, for a 55 percent mark.

Second best shot on the squad was Carl "Red" Ciccozzi, who chalked up a 30 percent mark.

Paradoxically, however, Ciccozzi was the poorest of the regulars on his foul tries, getting 10 for 42.

Tom Miner caged 19 of 37 free throws and was the only other player to net more than half his tries. Turnabout again, Miner was the poorest shot on the squad, caging only 15 percent of his tries from the floor.

Virgil Kelly committed the most fouls during the season, statistics reveal. In 16 games, he was caught 55 times. Miner ranked second, with 54 violations called against him in 18 games. Pager committed only 33.

Kelly was second in total points scored, with 108, followed by Miner and Pete Cain with 87 and 83 respectively.

The Quakers as a team hit the floor for a 28 percent mark from the hoop, about average as teams go. Their foul shooting, only 46 percent, however, was about 14 points below being considered good.

WOOSTER TOPPING OHIO COLLEGIATES

Lace Kenyon Thoroughly In Latest Victory; Ohio Conference Closing

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, March 2—Wooster and Xavier shared top billing in Ohio college basketball today.

Coach Mose Hole's Wooster Scots grabbed part of the spotlight by dumping Kenyon, 70-56, last night to clinch an undisputed Ohio conference title. They already had carried off the all-games crown.

Coach Lew Hilt's Xavier Musketeers became the first Ohio quintet to receive a post-season tournament bid. The Muskies, winner of 21 out of 26, voted to accept an invite to the National Association of Intercollegiate basketball (NAIB) tourney opening Monday at Kansas City.

Bowling Green (won 27-lost 5) and Toledo (21-5) kept their national tourney chances alive with victories. The Bee-Gees poured it on off-beaten Findlay, 90-33, while Toledo barely nosed Wayne at Detroit, 44-41. It was the season finale for both winners.

In the only other game, Cedarville exploded in the second half to thump Wilmington, 60-42. One point separated the teams at halftime.

Wooster went to Mount Vernon last night needing a victory to keep Ohio Wesleyan from taking the conference title. The Scots lost little time taking command, running up a 20-8 lead in the first six minutes.

Earl Shaw and Ralph Wagner bagged 56 points between them to spark the Wooster attack, while Kenyon's Eppa Rixey continued his scoring spree with 19.

Wooster's win left Wesleyan second in the league. Capital's defending champion third and Toledo fourth.

Coach Harold Anderson of Bowling Green started his first team against Findlay, ran up a 26-6 score and then substituted freely. He used 17 players, but only one—Charley Share—hit more than 10 points.

The six foot-10 inch center connected for 21. Bob Wortman had 19 for Findlay.

Dal Zober was the big gun for Toledo. He bagged 13 points, but lost game scoring honors to Wayne's Jim Ruzinski, who had 17.
